Notes

Wow! Did I say wow? WOW! That may sound a bit trite or over used as an expression kind of like "awesome," but that is how I feel about the Family Dynamics Facilitator Training in Farmington. What this will allow Tobin and I to do is to put on an eight week marriage seminar using the Family Dynamics material. The power is not in the material. The power is not in the facilitators. The power is in what couples commit to do for each other and in the accountability that is created from the group sessions. Tobin and I have just received a concentrated dose, but feel absolutely blessed for taking the opportunity to go through it. (We have six more hours to complete the training which is supposed to take place this afternoon.) We both feel we have a pretty good marriage. We desire to put the Lord first, our overall objectives are the same both in our ministry and family lives, we give and receive affection, but sometimes our communication absolutely stinks. Why? Because we find ourselves going in different directions, meeting at the house, but not really taking the time or sometimes not having the time to really talk about what the other is doing. Sometimes we double book because the "left hand does not know what the right hand is doing" so Tobin will schedule something for us and I will too. The left hand/right hand bit sounds Biblical, but it is not a good practice in marriage. It is a killer. That said, this training has already had a powerful effect on us as a married couple. We fully expect greater things to come as we continue to implement the tools given for improving our marriage.

That said, we encourage couples to put February 9 and 10 on your calendars to go to Farmington with several other couples from here. Joe Beam will be the presenter and he is known nationally and internationally for his Love, Sex, and Marriage Seminars. Shortly after that we would like to host the eight week seminar that lets each couple experience the power of love as they put into practice the material used in the Family Dynamics Interactive Class. Brace yourselves for life changing marriages.

-Love, Gene
